

Heritage Tour Homes within the Historic District of the City of Lancaster

The shaded area of this map represents the Historic District of the City of Lancaster. It became a National Register of Historic Places in 1983 and includes most of the original town as laid out in 1800. Many historic homes and buildings are located within the district, including the Sherman House Museum, The Georgian Museum, and the Decorative Arts Center of Ohio based in the Reese-Peters mansion.

The Fairfield County Heritage Association was established in 1962 by seven local women, with the intentions of preserving the older homes of Lancaster. The Association then merged with the Fairfield County Historical Society in 1968. The Association holds an annual Tour of Homes, and those are represented by the blue house icons. The tours have been an ongoing event for over 50 years, with several homes making the list multiple times.
